*Advocate for Coal's Essential Role
in West Virginia's Economy and Future*

With the industry under constant attack by national democrats and environmental extremists, West Virginia, as well as states across the nation, are in jeopardy of losing even more coal mining and coal power plant jobs. Worse, the shift from coal fired electricity generation to other forms of energy leave the grid unstable and put us at risk of not having the power we need to run our homes and businesses in times of extreme weather events or other calamities.

As a member of Friends of Coal, you have special access to information and opportunities for engagement with the broader coal-support community:
